SPIN a SNOWMAN Game EXTRAS

Spin a SNOWMAN

Be the first to build a snowman!

EXAMPLE

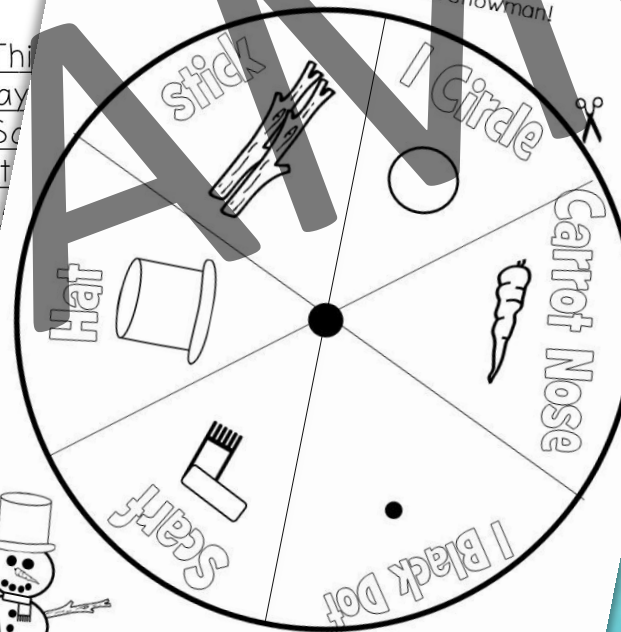

Snowmen are fun to build. This snowman came to life one day. He woke up at night. I call him Sam. Sam got into a snowball fight with the other snowmen. He had a blast!

Spin a SNOWMAN

Be the first to build a snowman!

Directions:

Cut out the arrow. Use a brass brad to place the arrow in the center of the circle. Students can play with a partner or by themselves. Each time they spin the arrow, they will draw one part of the snowman on the blank page to correspond with what they landed on during the spin. If they land on the same part and can't add anymore, they skip that turn. The person who builds the snowman first wins.

If playing with a partner, we always let the youngest person start or play Rock Paper and Scissors.

After students draw their snowman they can write about the snowman. It can be a "HOW TO BUILD" a snowman story or a fictional story. (see example)
